A MAJORITY OF FRENCH PEOPLE SUPPORT THE YELLOW VESTS MOVEMENT AND THEIR ANGER-----

According to the polls, Odoxa, 84% of French people find the movement "justified" on November 28th (53% quite justified and 31% rather justified). The next day, the Ifop has 71% positive views among respondents ("including 48% support and 23% sympathy"). Thirteen points of difference, therefore. According to the methodology of the institutes and insofar as each of the two studies was carried out on a thousand people representative of the French population, the margin of error can be of 2.5 points at Odoxa and 2.8 points at the Ifop. That is a total of 5.3. The difference between the two figures could actually not be 13 points, but rather 7.8 points ... or 18.3 points. Finally, and this is surely where the explanation stands: the question posed differs from one institute to another. Odoxa asks respondents whether the movement is justified. Ifop questions about support and sympathy. Also, Odoxa does not offer the possibility to the respondents not to pronounce. While Ifop respondents can declare their indifference (they are 12% in this case). Source : Ifop, BFM TV, Figaro, Liberation
